

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

For Suz Meyers, life was once about corporate America, getting ahead, and running her own business. But a church mission trip up-ended those priorities and changed her life for the better. Serving the poor and coming alongside struggling people became her passion and soon, Suz was ministering to women and helping them rediscover the divine.

Her book, Rediscovering the Divine: Seeing God in a Whole New Way, serves as her statement of faith. She gives an account of her personal journey beginning with her Catholic up-bringing, detouring through a spiritual crisis, and finally, conducting a thorough investigation of God.

Along the way, she learned to consider the Gospel from a new perspective. Through her questioning, Suz opens a window to rediscovering the divine. “I seek God with all my heart, mind, and soul, and I’m very much looking forward to the day when I get to meet him face to face!”

Suz is the daughter of a Dutch mother, who survived childhood amid the Nazi invasion of The Netherlands during WWII, and an American father. After a chance meeting at a sidewalk café in Europe and nursing an abscessed tooth back to health, her parents fell madly in love and eventually, established a family and a life in Denver, Colorado, where Suz and her older brother were born. In 2003, she married Paul whom she describes as a good man who loves the Lord.

Suz and Paul live in Highlands Ranch, Colorado with their two fur babies, Buddy and Charlie. She enjoys spending time in her garden, practicing her photography skills, and throwing dinner parties for friends and family.
